HISTORY

"Never before in history had societies thought that such a set of high expectations about marriage was either realistic or desirable. ... [T]he adoption of these unprecedented goals for marriage had unanticipated and revolutionary consequences that have since come to threaten the stability of the entire institution." – Stephanie Coontz (Marriage, A History)

Multimedia	Multiple points of view	Doesn't promote a particular moral standard
	Adaptable materials	Empower users learn, pray, and discuss

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

1. How are conversations about sexuality happening in your faith communities, if they are happening at all? Consider who is involved, what topics are covered, and what is the nature of the conversation.
2. How can each of the following stakeholders work to facilitate healthy and constructive discussions surrounding sexuality and faith: ministers, lay leaders, congregants, denominational leaders, and community members?
3. What resources would be useful for facilitating conversations around faith and sexuality in your community? Consider how these resources might be developed and how these resources might be delivered.
